Rhode Island Reds
Meet Henrietta!

Henrietta is a Rhode Island Red!

She is a friendly, curious, and hardworking hen who lives at Triple G Farms. Henrietta loves her farm family, keeps everyone entertained, and gives us beautiful brown eggs!

A Friendly, Hardworking, and Eggcellent Farm Friend

About the Breed

Rhode Island Reds are one of the most popular chicken breeds in the United States. They were developed in Rhode Island in the 1800s. They are known for their beautiful reddish-brown feathers, friendly personalities, hardiness, and excellent egg-laying ability.

5 Fun Facts About Rhode Island Reds

1. They have beautiful reddish-brown feathers.
2. They are friendly, curious, and intelligent.
3. They are excellent layers of large brown eggs.
4. They are hardy and do well in many weather conditions.
5. They are calm, dependable, and make wonderful backyard chickens.

What Makes Henrietta Special?

Henrietta is curious, confident, and always has something interesting to do! She loves exploring the farm, scratching in the dirt, and looking for tasty treats. She takes good care of her eggs and is a wonderful example of how friendly and rewarding chickens can be!

How to Care for a Chicken

- Food & Water: A healthy diet of layer feed, clean water, and kitchen scraps in moderation keeps Henrietta strong and healthy.
- Clean Coop: A clean, dry coop keeps hens safe, comfortable, and healthy.
- Fresh Air & Space: Chickens need room to roam, scratch, and explore during the day.
- Safety: A secure coop and run help protect chickens from predators.
- Kindness: Gentle handling and care help chickens feel safe and loved.

Did You Know?

Rhode Island Reds usually lay 4 to 6 large brown eggs each week. Each egg can take about 24 to 26 hours to form inside the hen before it is laid. Henrietta lays her eggs in a cozy nesting box with soft straw to keep them safe.

Let's Learn Together!

- Why do you think chickens need a safe coop?
- How can we be kind and gentle with chickens?
- What do you think might happen after Henrietta lays an egg?
- What are some ways we can help take care of Henrietta and keep her healthy and happy?

Chickens are a gift from God.